Definitions

In general terms, the difference between a defined contribution (DC) plan and a defined benefit (DB) plan, such as PERA, is:

- DC plan - Your total retirement benefit is equal to your total accumulated account balance or the amount that has been contributed by you and your employer plus any income, expenses, gains or losses [e.g. 401(a) DCP, 457, 401(k), 401(a) Match].
- DB plan - Your total retirement benefit under a defined benefit plan is based on number of years of service, your age and your highest average salary. With this information, a monthly benefit is calculated which you will receive for the rest of your life. Unlike the DC plan, the total benefit is not directly based on how much was contributed on your behalf.
- Pension Plan – A plan that provides benefits, after retirement, from a trust or other separately maintained fund, by the purchase of insurance, or from general assets (unfunded plan). The amount of benefits is either specified or calculated in accordance with a set formula based on factors such as age and service.
- Supplemental Benefits – Benefits provided by a pension plan in addition to regular retirement benefits. Supplemental benefits vary according to the terms of a plan and include such items as the payment of benefits in the event of terminations, death, disability or early retirement.

(*) Eligibility for this plan as of 05/01/03 is, " "Eligible employee" means a member of the general assembly, the governor, the lieutenant governor, the attorney general, the chief deputy attorney general, the solicitor general, the secretary of state, the deputy secretary of state, the state treasurer, the deputy state treasurer, a district attorney, an assistant district attorney, a chief deputy district attorney, a deputy district attorney, or other employee of a district attorney, a member of the public utilities commission and an executive director of a department of state appointed by the governor, an employee of the senate or house of representatives, and a non-classified employee of the office of the governor, for whom a defined contribution plan has been established pursuant to the provisions of this article" [C.R.S. 24-52-202].
